A poem by Liǔ Zōng Yun (, 773–819), displayed on the left with traditional characters and on the right using "simplified" characters. The LaTeX CJK package interfaces nicely with Emacs/Mule, so that different character sets (Big5 for traditional characters, GB2312 for "simplified" characters) can be mixed within the same file. This is especially useful in this case, since the character ǎi is not part of the GB2312 character set, so I substituted the correct Big5 character on the right hand side. The input file was exported using the Emacs function `cjk-write-file` supplied by the CJK package and the resulting file was processed with pdfLaTeX.
